Encouraging Churches
through Mother Tongue Lectionaries

Martin Weber

LUTHERAN BIBLE TRANSLATORS

Peoples' lives and their communities are transformed hearing God's Word in their mother tongue.

God's Word includes
the Old Testament, not just the New Testament!

Many language
communities are too
small to receive a full Bible.

Many Churches regularly read portions from the Old and New Testaments following a (3-year) Lectionary Program. A lectionary is a pre-selected collection of scriptural readings from the Bible that can be used for public worship services. They have an interesting history...

Many church bodies are asking for mother-tongue
lectionaries. The Kwanja situation...

Where published New Testaments exist,
translating and adding Old Testament readings is often well within our reach

Producing lectionary readings for upcoming Sundays following the lectionary in use in a major language is relatively easy, but such publications are of limited and temporary value.

Producing an ongoing (perpetual) Lectionary which covers not only the current year(s) is a significant challenge, because of the timing of Easter and the way that affects the rest of the church year.

The Revised Common Lectionary is used as the basic source by many church bodies in their development of their lectionaries, so following that and the practices of the church(es) involved, any language group can come up with a perpetual lectionary which should accurately track the year-by-year lectionary the church body will be producing in future.

Organizing and printing these 3-year Lectionaries is becoming easier. Paratext has a tool called Bible Module which helps significantly in organizing the translated texts

Response to these lectionary projects in Cameroon so far has been quite encouraging. Church members value these books often more than the Bible or New Testament.

Lectionary projects can multiply the actual use of mother-tongue Scriptures.

A future project: recording of these readings which Bible study groups could use during the week before the texts are used in church.

An important goal which will optimise the impact of ALL Scripture read in ALL languages is strengthening the capacity (and habits) of church readers

HOW TO PREPARE A LECTIONARY

What is the Revised Common Lectionary?

The Revised Common Lectionary (RCL) is a three-year cycle of weekly Scripture readings used in church services in varying degrees by the majority of mainline Protestant churches in the United States and Canada, as well as in related church bodies in other parts of the world.

Our Target is to produce Mother Tongue Perpetual Lectionaries

Going from RCL References for each Sunday and special service –

Why doesn't one year's Series A Lectionary fit all of the "Series A" Lectionary years?

Because:

- The dates of Easter and the Church Seasons related to Easter change every calendar year,
The timing of Easter changes the numbers of Sundays between seasons
This means that the number of Sundays between Epiphany Sunday and Lent varies from 5 to 9, and the number of Sundays after Pentecost varies, so these sets of readings are numbered as "Propers", and are not all being used every year.
- There are two options for the Set of Psalms and Old Testament readings (especially after Pentecost), each set used in alternating years of the same series, and there are some other options for readings on some occasions, like Christmas

Adaptations made from RCL for the Kwanja EELC Lectionary

- Order of readings: ie in EELC, Psalms before Old Testament reading
- Specific Services / Occasions for the national Church body

Add Reformation Sunday, Cameroon added Youth Day, National Day sets of readings

Take out readings not used, like Easter vigil and Easter week readings

- Versification differences

What versification is the translation based on?

WORKING WITH NATIONAL TRANSLATORS

Some considerations –

- Translate lists of seasons and occasions into Mother Tongue Language
- Translate Book names into Mother Tongue
- Tables to Follow lectionary references by book, for Translators and Consultant Checking
- See paper for links to these

Adapting Bible modules to different languages and different church bodies

Good News!

Once a lectionary Bible module is developed for a church body, it can be fairly easily adapted

- to more languages in the same church
- for other church bodies which closely follow the RCL.

The Catholic Bible module is more complicated.

The Kwanja Catholic Lectionary is in our plans for next year.

It can then be adapted for other Catholic churches in French West Africa that follow their traditional 1970 Missal and Lectionary.

Old Testament Lectionary Summary Project

OCCASION—Year A, Sunday After Epiphany (Baptism of the Lord)

SECTIONS AND HEADING—These verses are excerpts from what is known as the first Servant Song of Isaiah. Some scholars, such as Westermann, regard the identity of this “Servant” as the nation of Israel. However, the lectionary places this reading in association with the inauguration of the ministry of Jesus Christ, a position that agrees with the Church’s traditional use of it. The translator should therefore compose an appropriate section heading, perhaps on the order of, “God describes his Servant who will come.” It may be good to specify in the section heading that God is the speaker, for this fact is not made explicit in 42:1.

LECTIONARY LINKS—Acts 10:34–38

This passage describes the baptism of Cornelius, a Gentile, and how the Holy Spirit came upon him. This event illustrates the fact that Christ came to bring “justice” (Isa. 42:4) to all the earth, and to be a covenant to both Jews and Gentiles.

Moreover, in this reading Peter refers to God having anointed Jesus with the Holy Spirit and having given him power. See below (Mt. 3:13–17) for how this relates. Peter links this anointing with Jesus’ purpose of healing people and freeing them from the prison of Satan’s power.

Mt. 3:13–17

This Gospel reading has two connections with Isa. 42:1: (1) God proclaims that he is well pleased with Jesus, as he is well pleased with the Servant. (2) The Spirit descends on Jesus, as God places his Spirit on the Servant, to equip him to do his task. These NT events invoke this Servant Song, making it clear that Jesus is the Servant in question. He is the one who will bring justice to the nations, gently, mercifully, and faithfully. He will bring the New Covenant to both the Jews and the Gentiles. He will be the light of the Gentiles, to bring them into true worship of God.

Old Testament Lectionary Summary Project

תְּנַעֲבֵד יְאֹתָמָךְ בָּבוֹ בְּחִינֵּי רָצְתָה נֶפֶשׁ
נֶקְרֵי רָוחֵל עַלְיוֹ מְשֻׁבָּט לְנוּם יוֹצִיא:

Ecce servus meus, suscipiam eum; electus meus, complacet sibi in illo anima mea; dedi spiritum meum super eum, iudicium gentibus proferet.

Behold<sup>a</sup> my-servant<sup>b</sup>; I-uphold-him; c my-chosen-one<sup>d</sup>; my-soul<sup>e</sup> is-pleased<sup>f</sup> (with him);

I-have-put<sup>g</sup> my-spiri<sup>h</sup> upon-him; he-will-bring-forth<sup>i</sup> justice<sup>j</sup> to-the-nations<sup>k</sup>

TEXT—For this verse, LXX reads:

Ιακωβ ὁ παῖς μου ἀντιλημψόμαι αὐτοῦ
Ισραὴλ ὁ ἐκλεκτός μου προσεδέξατο αὐτὸν ἡ ψυχή μου

'Jacob is my servant; I will help him.'

Israel is my chosen one; my soul has accepted him'.

But Vulg. and NVulg. support the MT reading.

SYNTAX—BH poetry is often very elliptical and succinct in its syntax, as in the first bicolon of this verse [Young]. Most English translations smooth it out by adding prns. and the like, e.g., "Behold my servant, whom I uphold, my chosen, in whom my soul delights." This translation practice is perfectly acceptable. The translator will, of course, wish to take into account the receptor language's preferences regarding ellipsis, particularly in respect to poetry or elegant language [Pohlig].

LEXICON—a. Behold, my-servant; I-uphold-him interj. הֵן hēn [HALOT p. 251], [TWOT 510]: 'behold' [ESV, NASB; Oswalt, Young, Westermann], 'here is' [most vc], 'see' [Childs, Watts]. TEV adds, 'The Lord says' to introduce this passage.

b. Behold, my-servant; I-uphold-him

כָּבֵד 'ebed with 1cs suff. [HALOT p. 774], [TWOT 1553a]; 'servant' [all vc].
